

Piperpotamus learns about Coronavirus

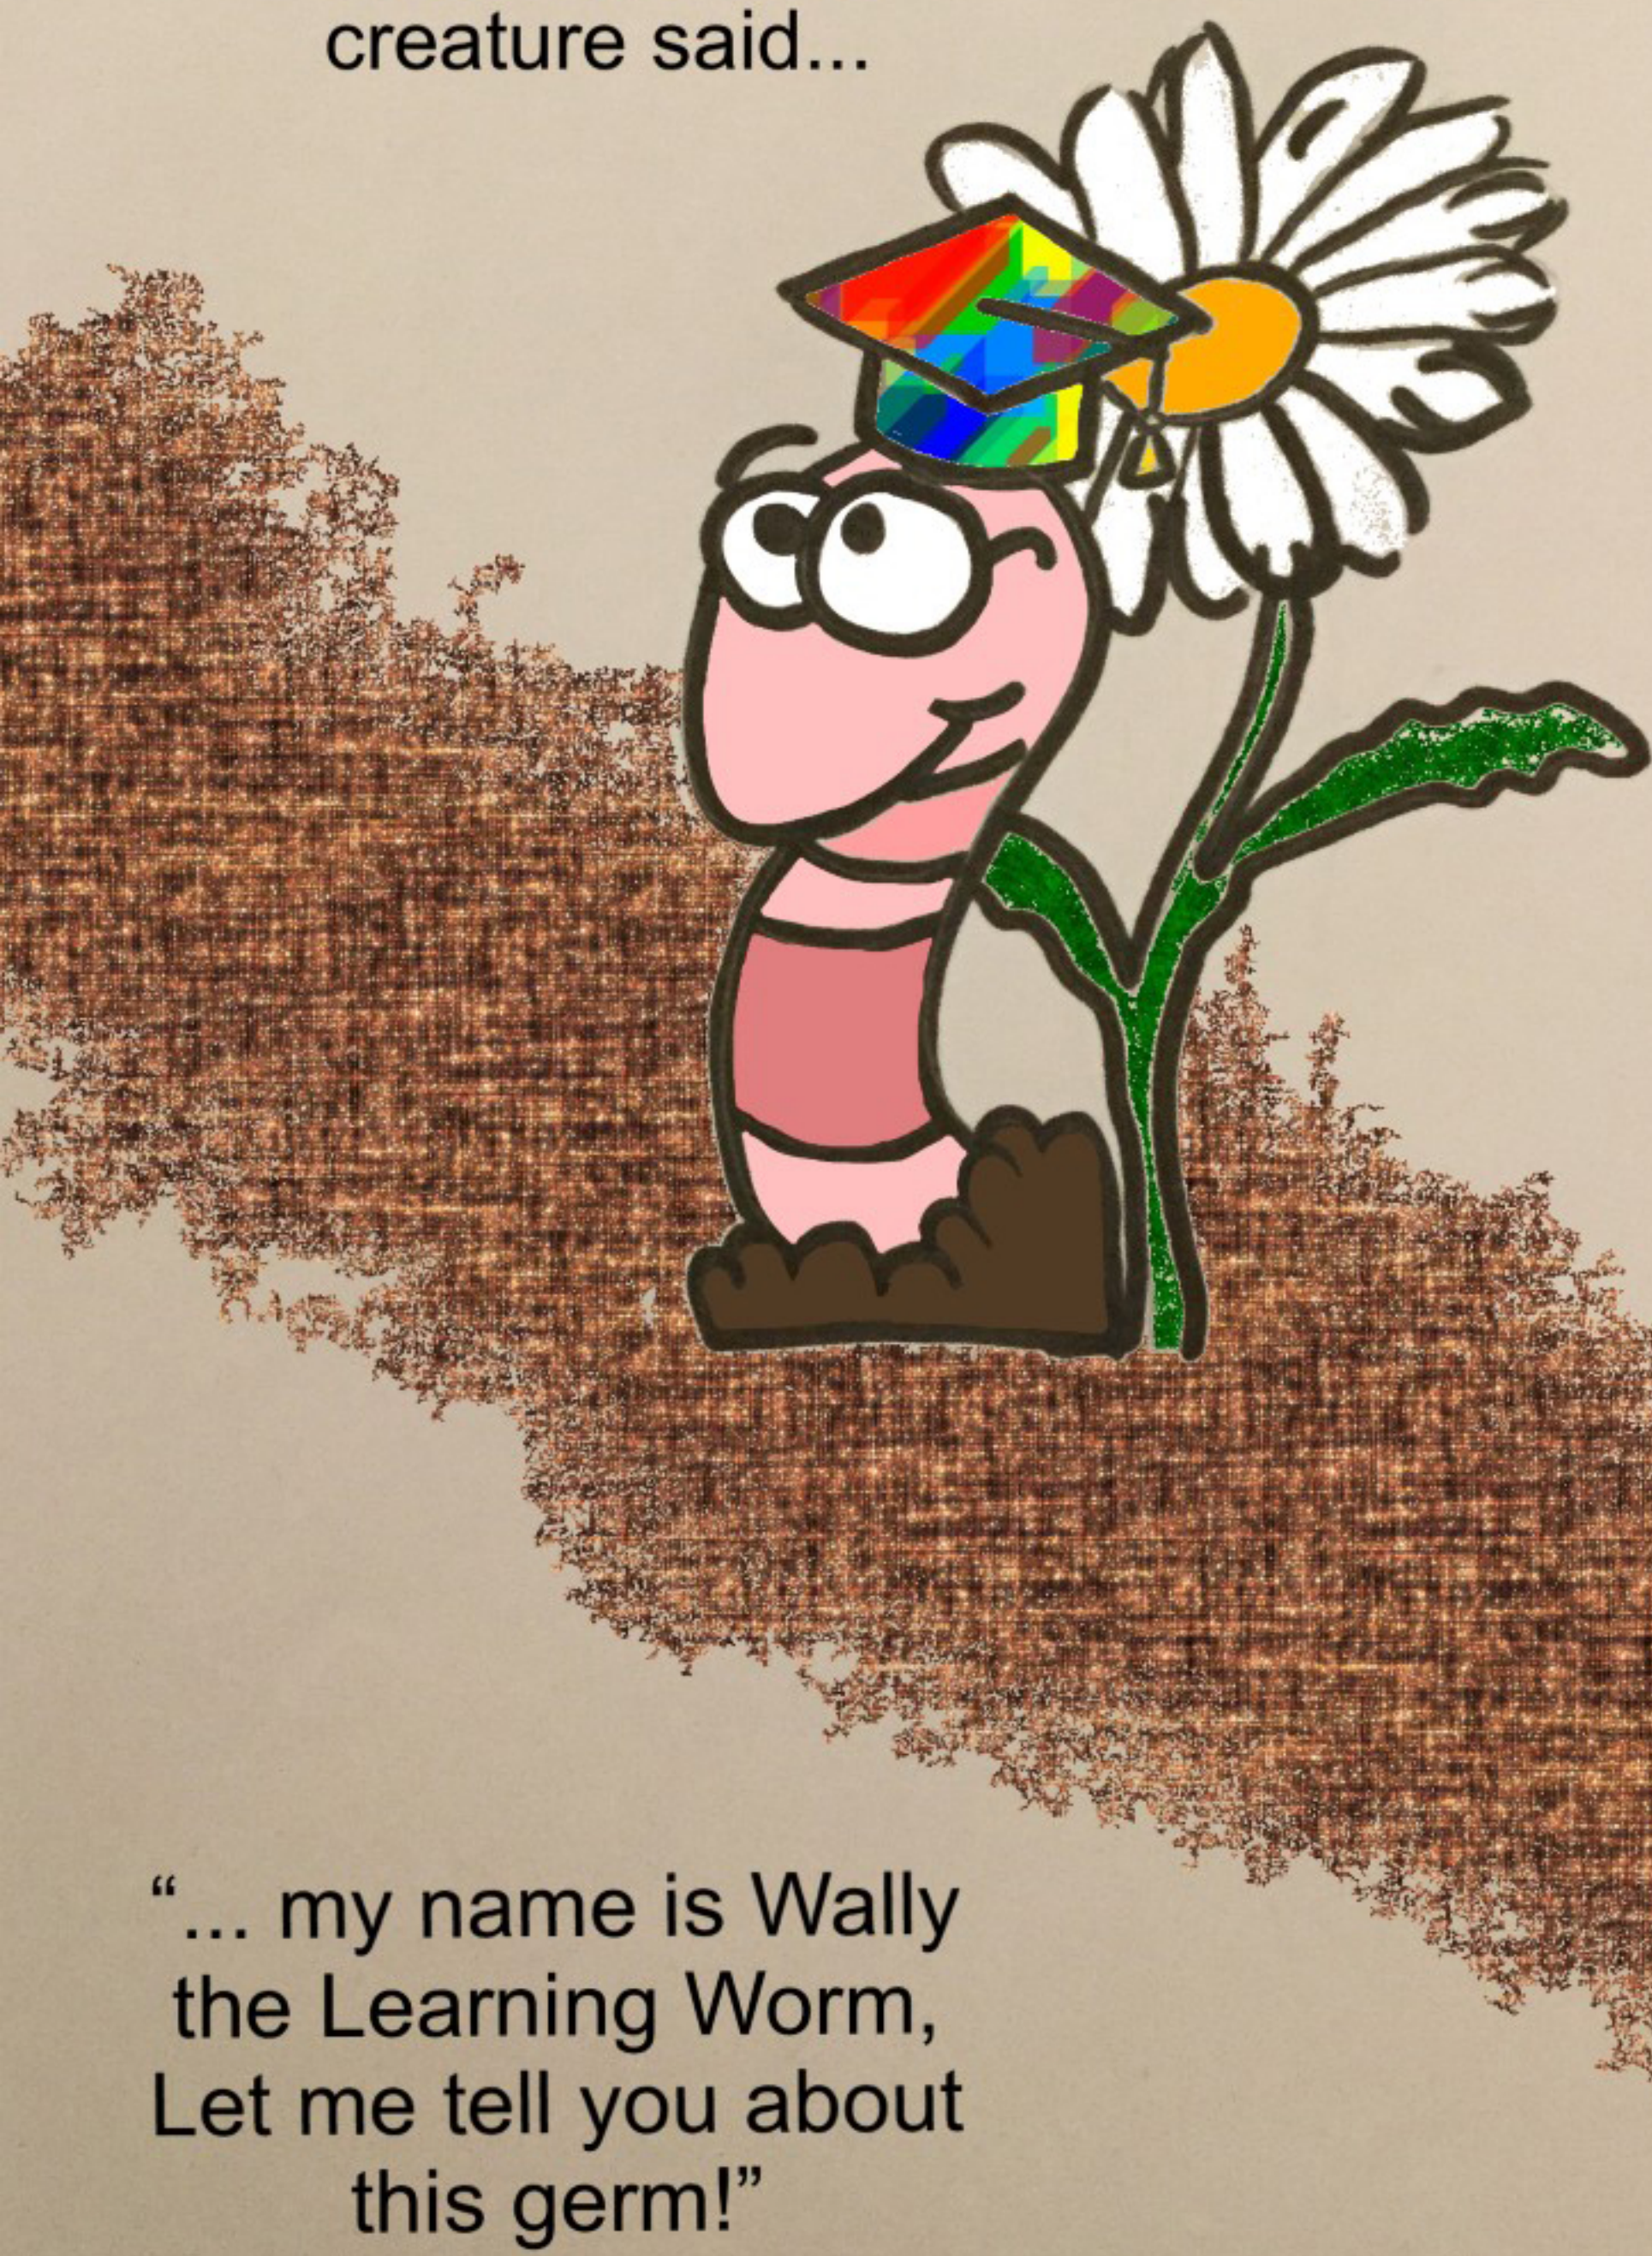

Piperpotamus feels quite glum,
He sits at home and twiddles his thumbs.
He`s starting to get rather fed up,
Staying at home with a grown up!

He puts on his wellies and plays in the mud,
It starts to rain and he puts up his hood.
He`s heard about a nasty germ,
It`s been on the telly, he`s getting concerned.

Then out of the ground there
pops up a head, “Hello Piper” the creature said...

“... my name is Wally
the Learning Worm,
Let me tell you about
this germ!”

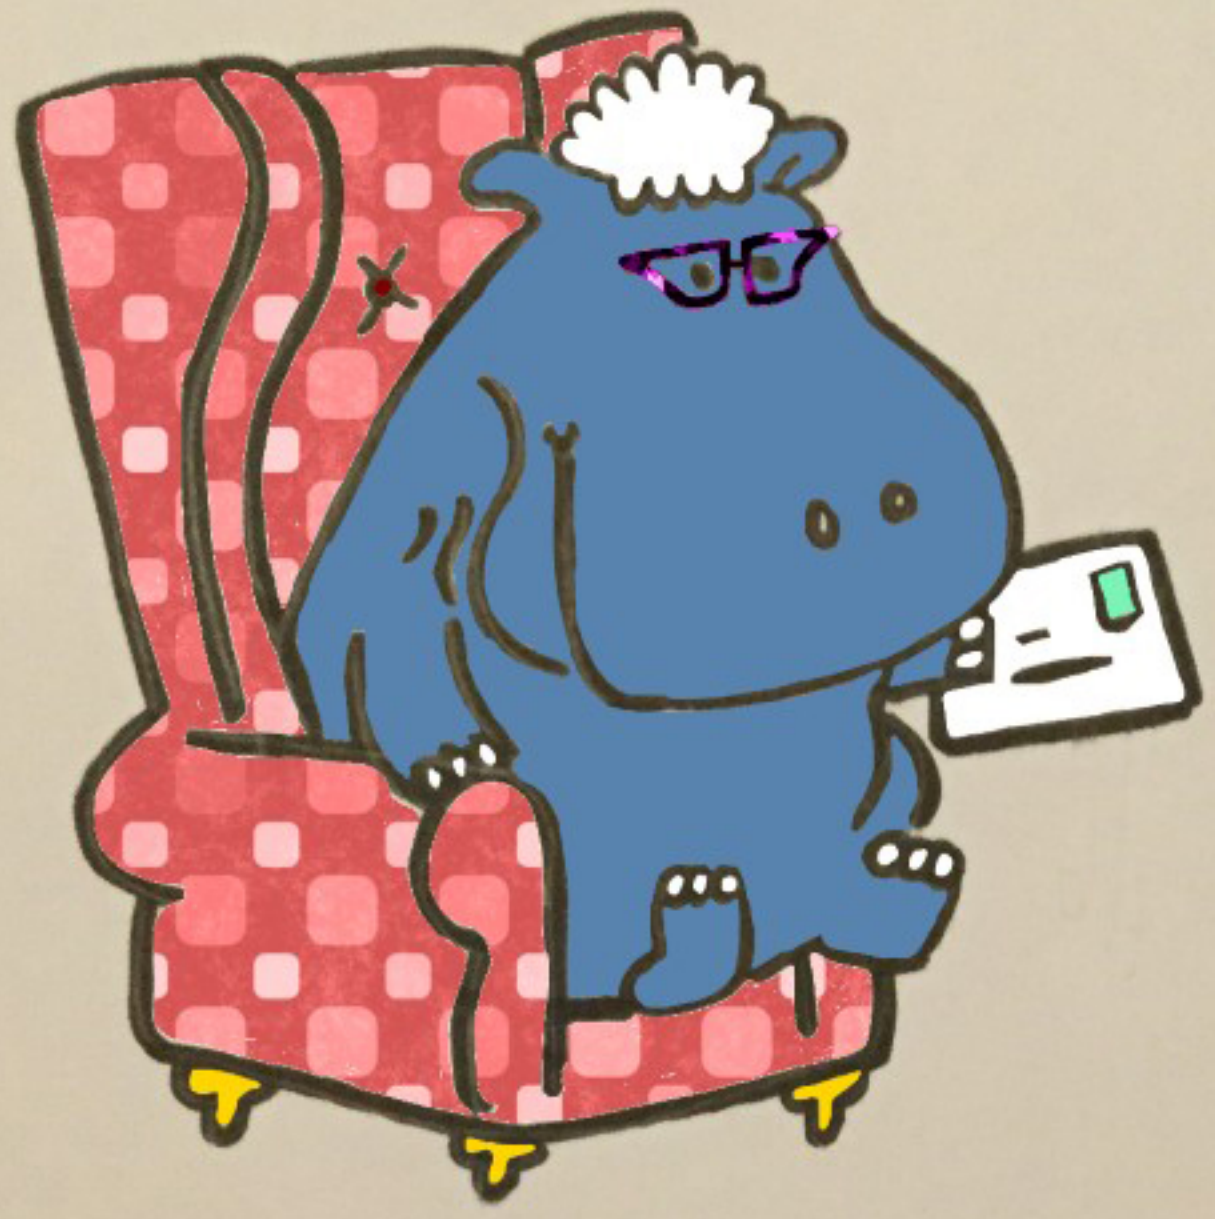

“Coronavirus is too small to see,
It can be passed on by a cough or a sneeze”.
Piper bends down and looks at the worm,
“But what would happen if I caught the germ?”

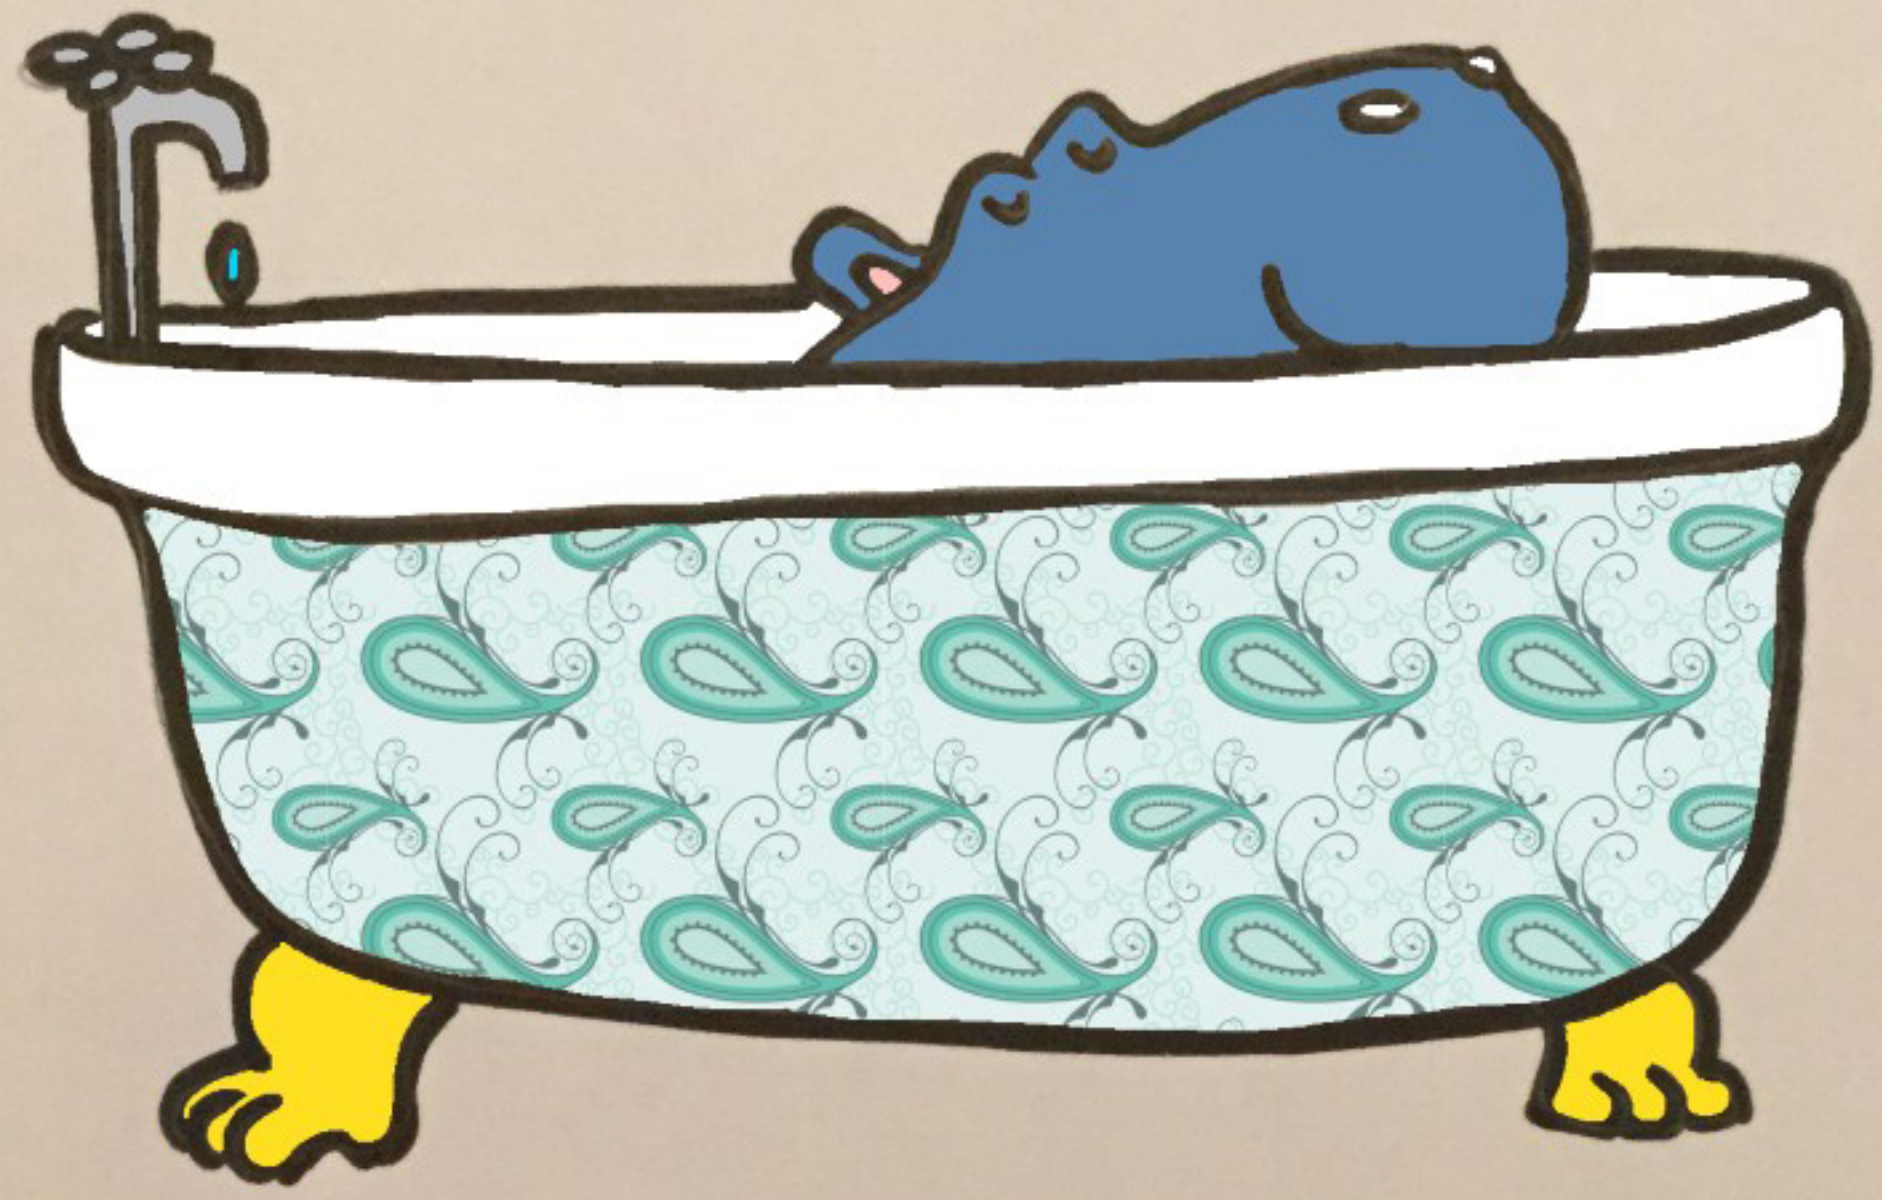

“Some people get a cough or a fever,
Some will get both and some will get neither.
It can be worse for those who are older,
So they should stay home until it’s all over!”

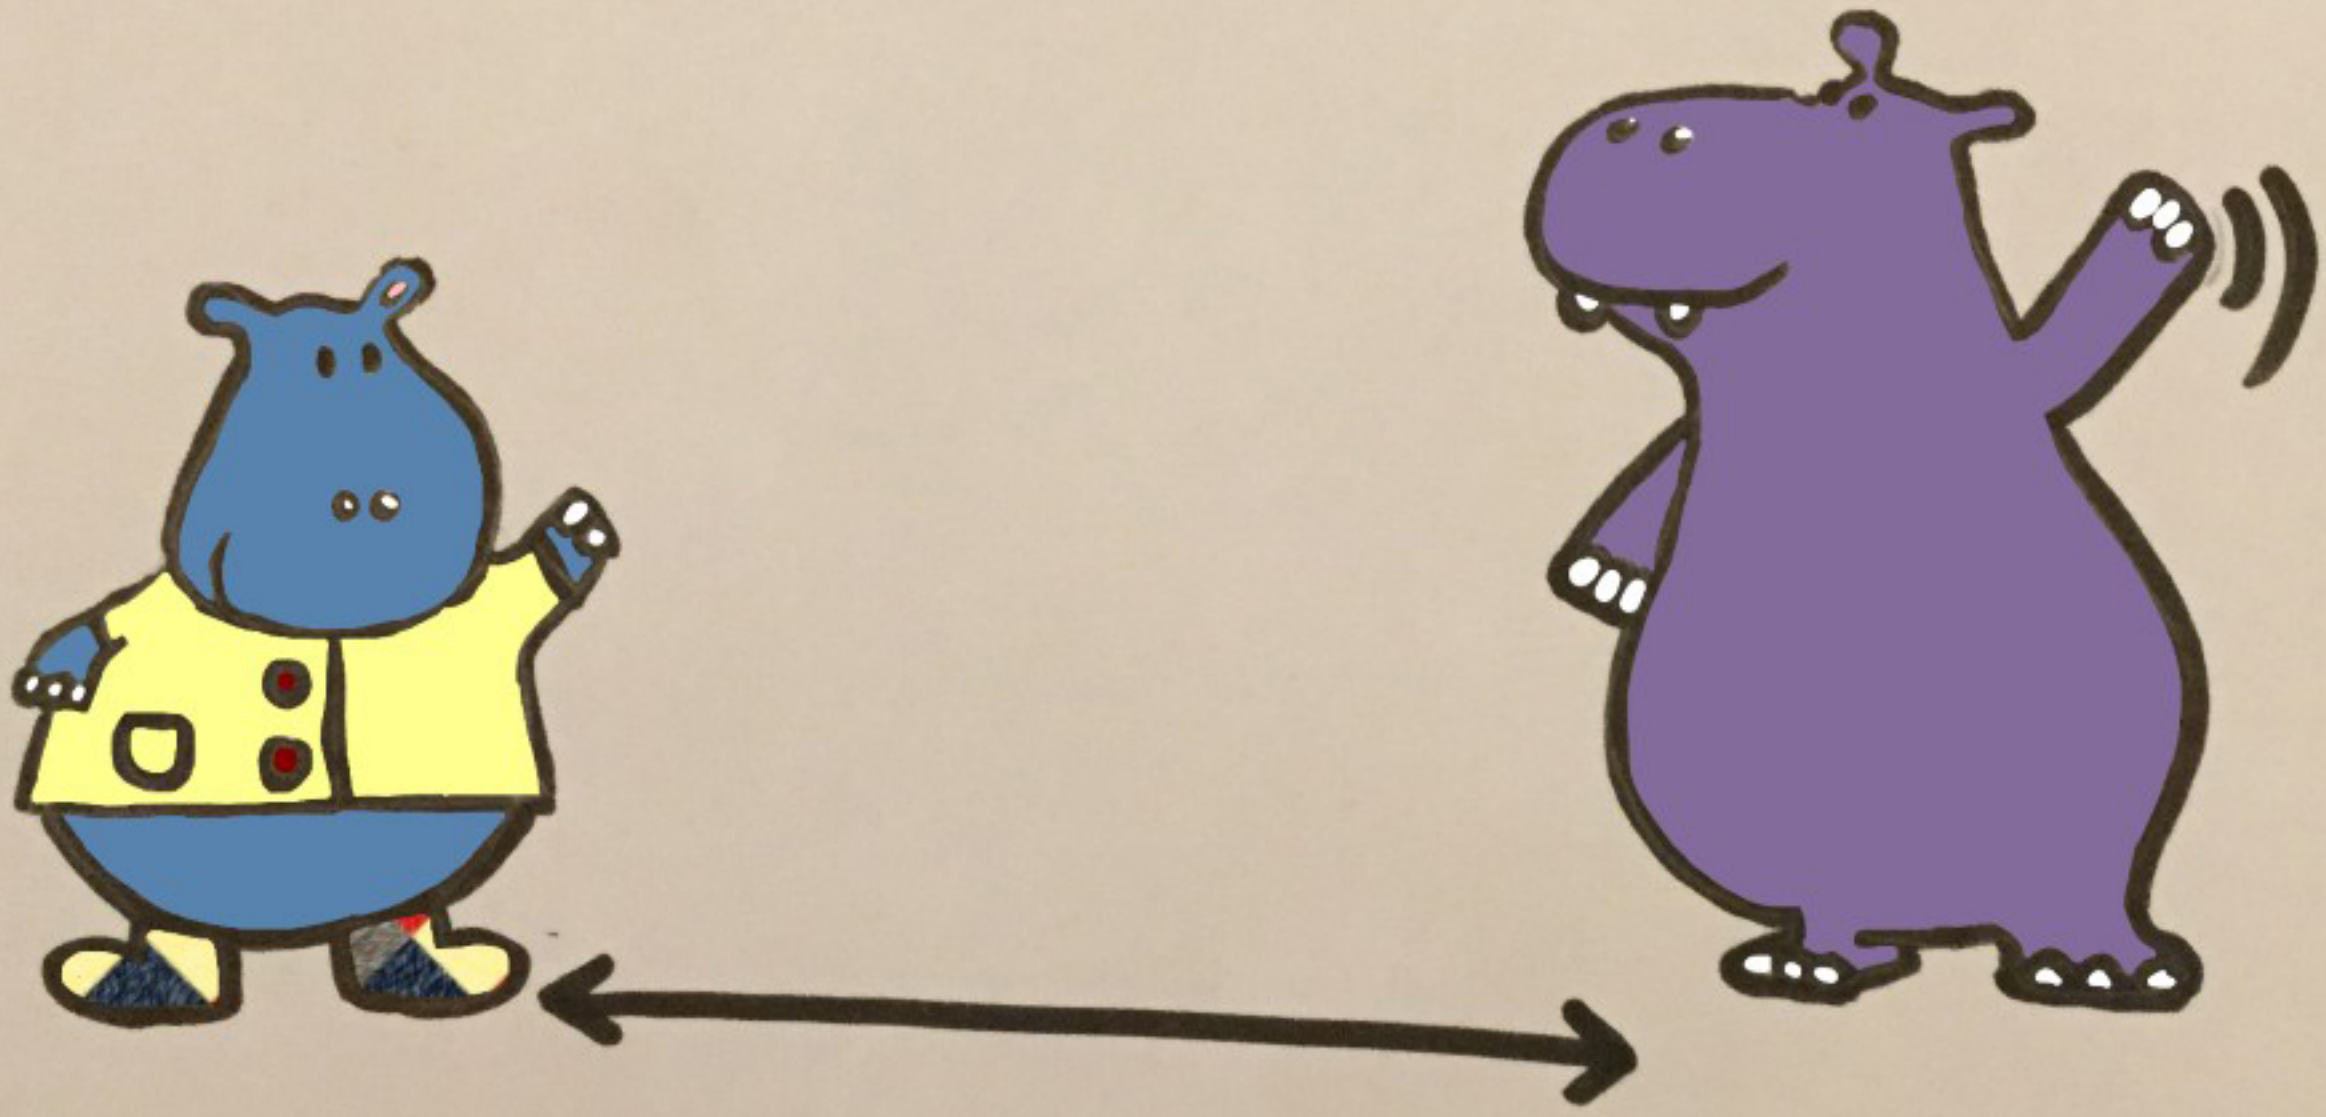

“But won’t grandma be all alone?”
The worm replies “we could call on her on the phone!
Or draw her a picture or send her a letter”,
Piper smiles... “then she’s sure to feel better!”

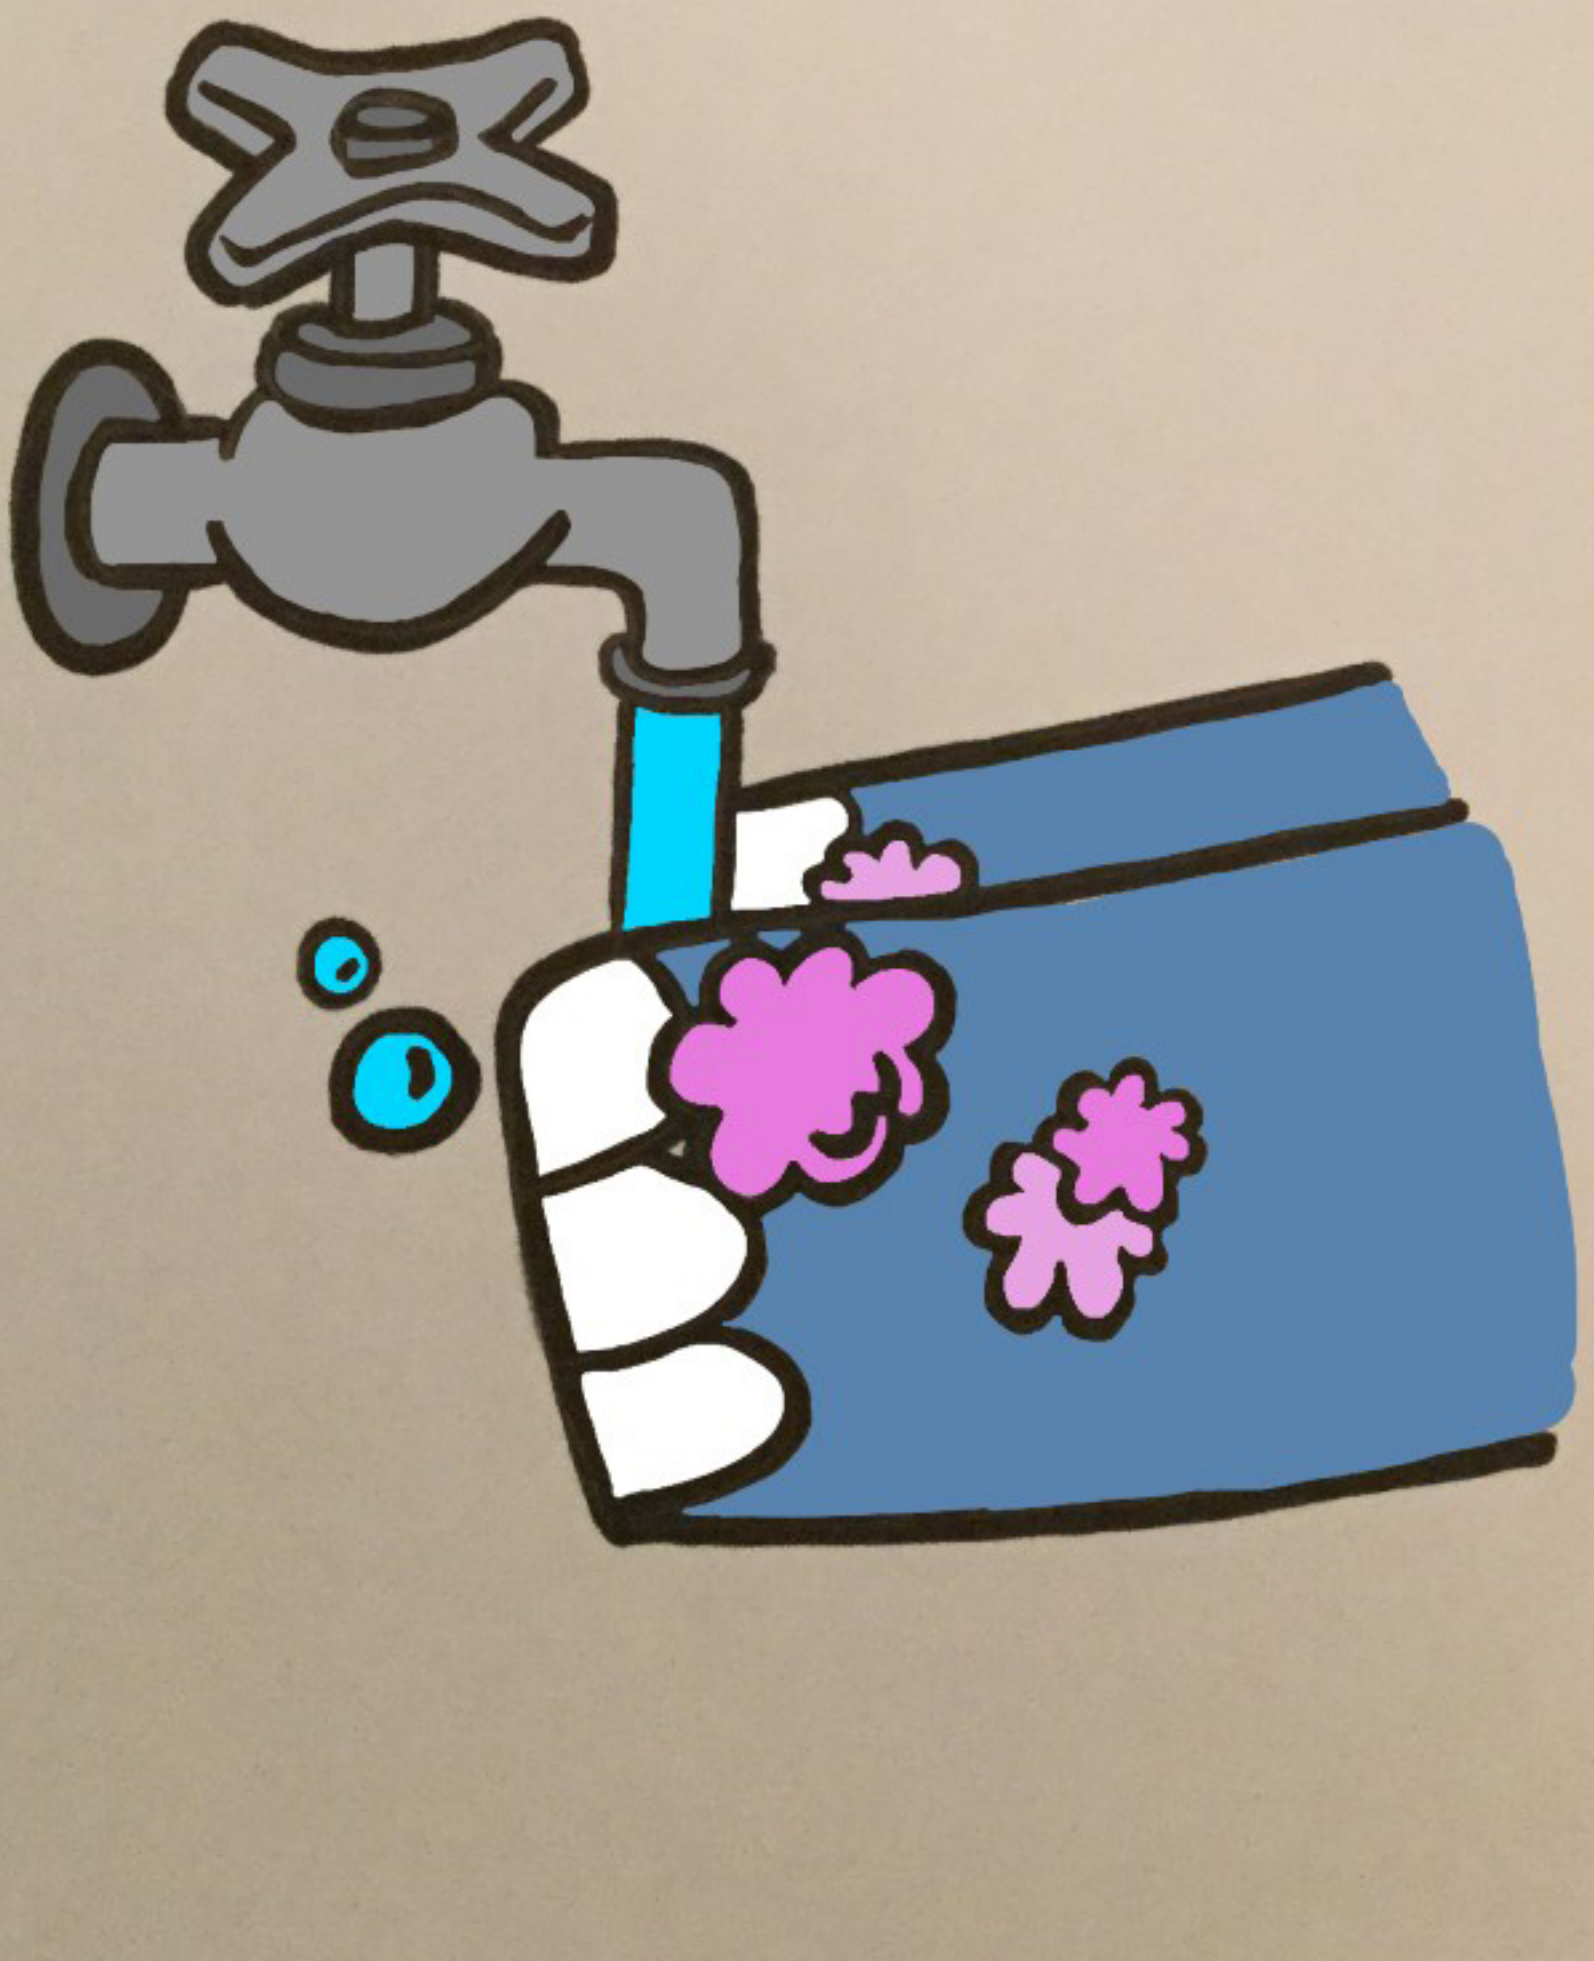

Piper asks Wally “If I had a deep cleanse,
Then could I go and play with my friends?”
The worm replies “Sorry, it’s best we stay here,
Until the doctors give the all clear”.

“We can go for a walk or a run every day,
As long as we stay 2 meters away...

... from neighbours and friends who are out and about,
You can give them a wave or even a shout!”

“Warm water and soap will keep your hands clean,
And wash off the bugs that cannot be seen.”

“Don’t worry...” says Wally, “this won’t be forever,
Things change all the time, it’s just like the weather.
The clouds have gone it’s a lovely day,
Can you think of a game we can play?”

The End.